Headline:
Often wet and windy on Sunday.

Today:
Heavy rain at first, accompanied by strong and gusty winds, will clear east through the morning. A brief brighter interlude will follow, before more showery rain returns from the west through the afternoon. Maximum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Tonight:
Further showers, merging into longer spells of rain, throughout the evening and overnight. After a bit of a lull, winds strengthening through the night, with coastal gales developing. Minimum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Monday:
A wet and windy start with coastal gales during the morning. Becoming brighter, but remaining showery into the afternoon, though winds easing a touch. Generally on the cool side. Maximum temperature 11 deg C (52 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
A mixture of sunshine and showers on Tuesday and Wednesday, the showers mainly in coastal areas. Drier on Thursday. Rather cold, given northerly winds, with some overnight frost.
